

CUYAMACA COLLEGE COURSE OUTLINE OF RECORD

English 132 – Short Fiction Writing III

3 hours lecture, 3 units

Catalog Description

Take your writing to the next level with the third course in a four-part series on Short Fiction Writing. You'll focus on voice, structure, and revision as you write and refine a collection of original stories. Through workshops and guided critique, you'll strengthen your artistic identity and prepare your work for submission to literary magazines or contests. Completion of Short Fiction II is required; courses in the sequence may be taken individually thereafter.

Method of Evaluation

Grades are based on demonstrated proficiency in the subject matter determined by multiple measurements for evaluation. Assessment frameworks may include alternative, equity-minded approaches to evaluation, such as ungrading, labor-based grading, contract-based grading, etc.

The instructor continually evaluates students' writing and provides regular and timely feedback so that students can improve their writing skills. Feedback is strengths-based and supportive. The instructor also proactively addresses concerns with attendance and assignment outcomes before the student is in danger of failing the course.

Methods of evaluation may include:

- 1) Student writing and revision of short fiction.
- 2) Participation in writers' workshop, both orally and in writing.
- 3) Participation in class discussion, and writing exercises such as modeling based on published authors
- 4) Completion of short fiction portfolio (including exercises, drafts and revisions) as a final project.
- 5) Performative reading of original works composed for the class, presented as part of a final examination.

Method of Instruction

Instructors use culturally relevant and equity-minded approaches to teaching and learning. These approaches center student identities, values, experiences, and goals; use strengths-based approaches to learning; convey growth-minded faculty mindsets about student potential; offer just-in-time remediation strategies to boost language and writing skills; are attentive to student affective domains; and individualize support so that students may have equitable learning experiences.

On writing assignments, the instructor will include comments to indicate strengths and areas for improvement, enabling students to revise their work. Class time is also devoted to explaining and discussing various writing techniques, analysis and discussion of published and student writing, and peer commentary of selected assignments. A variety of teaching methods may be used:

- 1) Lecture by instructor, visiting writers, and media
- 2) Workshopping, reviewing, and reading activities in small or large groups
- 3) Discussion and writing exercises based on tools, techniques, and forms of short fiction
- 4) Discussion and analysis of short fiction by emerging, traditional, and/or contemporary authors
- 5) Individual conferences

Out-of-Class Assignments

- 1) Reading: Reading and studying of work by emerging, established and/or contemporary short fiction writers, researching material for works of short fiction
- 2) Writing: Composing and revising works of short fiction, reading and writing critiques of classmates' short stories, craft and imitation exercises
- 3) Other: Attending and/or participating in campus and community literary events and readings, submitting manuscripts to the Cuyamaca College literary journal, The Cuyamaca Creative, as well as researching markets for online and print publication opportunities.
